Round 1: Trigger Point
Delegate Count: 2 to 3

DASSP commences this year with the Trigger Point, a round in which speed of mind matters as much as knowledge itself. Two teams will be randomly paired together and called into a room, where a category head will ask each pair a series of seven questions live, ranging across Physics, Chemistry, and Biology, and which may take the form of direct questions or riddles pointing toward a scientific term, concept, or answer. Delegates are required to download the buzzer app on their phones prior to the round. Once a question is read out, the time will start, and the delegate who presses the buzzer first will earn the exclusive right to answer; the opposing team may not attempt that question, regardless of whether the answer given is correct or incorrect. The time allotted to answer each question will be 30 seconds or 45 seconds, at the discretion of the category heads.

A team that answers correctly earns 3 points for that question. A team that answers incorrectly loses 2 points. Delegates are encouraged to think carefully before pressing their buzzer, as an incorrect answer carries a real cost. A team that answers a question incorrectly is not disqualified from the match and remains eligible to buzz and attempt the next question. If neither team presses their buzzer within the allotted time, the question is left unanswered and no points are awarded to either team. Each match consists of exactly seven questions. Only 1 chosen delegate from the team by the category head will be allowed to operate the buzzer and answer for the entire team for the entire match.

Teams must ensure that both required delegates, a minimum of two and a maximum of three, are present in the room before their match begins, as no additional time will be granted to accommodate late arrivals. Only the buzzer, rough paper, and pens may be used; no personal stationery, notes, or electronic devices are permitted.

Note: This is an accumulation round. No team will be eliminated. All points earned in this round will carry forward and be added to Round 2 scores to determine advancement to Round 3.

Round 2: Push Your Luck
Delegate Count: 2 to 3

Round 2 asks how far a team's nerve will take it. Welcome to Push Your Luck, a round in which every step higher raises both the reward and the risk. Teams will be called into a room in batches. The same Tier 1 question will be displayed on screen for all teams in the batch simultaneously. Delegates will record their answers on the answer sheets provided to them. Any team that answers correctly may choose either to bank its points and exit the round, or to push forward to the next tier for a tougher question and a greater reward, while any team that answers incorrectly is eliminated from that batch on the spot. This process continues tier by tier, with only the teams that chose to push at the previous tier remaining in the room to attempt the next one. As the tiers progress, both the difficulty and the time allotted increase, and points are only secured the moment a team formally declares that it will bank, rather than push. There is no negative marking in this round; an incorrect answer results only in the forfeiture of unbanked points from that attempt, and never in a deduction below zero.

The three tiers, along with their time limits and point values, are set out below.

- Tier 1: one minute is allotted, carrying 5 points.
- Tier 2: two minutes are allotted, carrying 10 points.
- Tier 3: three minutes are allotted, carrying 15 points.
- Maximum possible score per team: 30 points, plus bonus as detailed below.

Each tier comes with the following rules and bonus opportunities:

- Each team is permitted exactly one hint during its entire climb, usable at any tier of its choosing.
- Using the hint immediately halves the points awarded for that specific tier if answered correctly, rounded down, but does not cause forfeiture of any kind.
- A team that reaches and correctly banks Tier 3 without having used its hint at any point during the climb earns a Jackpot Bonus of 5 additional points on top of its total.
- If a team answers any tier incorrectly, it immediately forfeits all points earned during that attempt, including any tier or tiers answered correctly but not yet formally banked.
- Choosing either Bank or Push will be asked to the delegates once the allotted time for the question is over and their answers are checked on the spot. If the answer of the specific teir is correct, only then will the team have the opportunity to Bank or Push. If the answer is incorrect, the team will be eliminated from Round 2.
- If time expires on a tier while a team is mid decision, it will be eliminated from Round 2.
- All required delegates, a minimum of two and a maximum of three, must be present in the room before their batch begins; no additional time will be granted to accommodate late arrivals.
- Only the rough paper, pens, and basic non-programmable calculators, where applicable to the subject, provided may be used; no personal stationery, notes, or electronic devices are permitted.

Note: This will be an elimination round. Only the top ten teams will advance to Round 3. An aggregate of Round 1 and Round 2 scores will decide which teams move on. In the event of a tie for the tenth qualifying position between two or more teams, a single tie breaker question will be given to all tied teams simultaneously, with one minute to write down their answer, and the team that answers correctly in the shortest time will be ranked highest among the tied teams and will advance.

Round 3:
The final round of DASSP will be a surprise round. Its format, rules, and requirements will be formally announced to all qualifying teams prior to the commencement of the round.
Note: Final decisions, as well as any potential changes, rest in the hands of the category heads.
