CATEGORY THEME: LAW

Did you see what happened, or only what you were meant to see? Fraudiye Files immerses participants in the world of criminal investigation, legal reasoning, and evidence analysis, where appearances can be deceptive and the smallest detail can completely change the course of an investigation. The category places teams in fictional criminal scenarios that demand more than simply identifying a suspect. Participants will have to examine information critically, connect seemingly unrelated details, question conflicting accounts, and determine which version of events is actually supported by the evidence. The category consists of three rounds, each approaching the investigation from a different perspective.

ROUND 1: CASE STUDY ANALYSIS:

Time: 1 Hour.
45 Minutes - Analysis & Decoding.
15 Minutes - Initial Report Writing.
Delegate Count: 2

Every investigation begins with a story. The question is whether that story holds up.
Teams will be presented with a detailed fictional criminal case containing a range of information, including statements, evidence, circumstances, and potential contradictions. Their task will be to examine the case carefully, identify what matters, connect different pieces of information, and develop a reasoned understanding of what may have occurred. Teams are expected to produce and submit an initial findings report. This round focuses on observation, evidence analysis, logical reasoning, and the ability to distinguish strong conclusions from unsupported assumptions. Participants will have to look beyond the obvious and determine which details genuinely change the case.

Note: Top 5 teams will qualify for Round 2.

ROUND 2: SCAVENGER HUNT
Time: 2 Hours.
Delegate Count: 3

The case no longer stays on paper. In the second round, teams will step into an unfolding investigation and follow a trail of information connected to a simulated crime. Clues will lead them from one discovery to another, requiring them to observe their surroundings, interpret new evidence, recognise connections, and gradually reconstruct what happened. Not every piece of information will necessarily lead where you expect it to. Teams will have to decide what deserves their attention, separate meaningful evidence from distraction, and work together to build the most convincing explanation of the events they uncover. This round tests investigative instinct, teamwork, speed, observation, and the ability to make connections under pressure.

Top 2 teams will qualify for Round 3.

ROUND 3: MOOT COURT
Time: 45 Minutes.
Delegate Count: 2

Finding an explanation is one thing. Proving it is another. The final round will bring the investigation to its conclusion, placing teams in a position where they must use everything they have learned to establish what they believe actually happened. Participants will be required to evaluate the available evidence, confront competing explanations, and present a coherent conclusion supported by their reasoning.

This round will follow the Jessup Guide for its proceedings. The final challenge is not simply about being the first team to name the culprit. It is about whether your explanation can survive scrutiny. Teams will need to demonstrate that their conclusion follows logically from the evidence and that they can defend their interpretation when it is questioned. This round brings together the core skills of Fraudiye Files: investigation, legal reasoning, evidence analysis, argumentation, and critical thinking.
